IMPORTANT.

Admission permits are valid for two years only, unless extensions are granted by the Head of the Local Administration.

The first extension will expire after one year, the second extension will run for another year ; the last extension will cover six years.

Consequently, admission permits will remain valid for ten years, provided the holders apply for extensions on or before the above indicated dates of expiration, and provided such extensions are granted.

It follows that, if a holder allows his permit to lapse a new permit can only be issued by the Head of the local Administration on payment of f. 100 —').

On leaving the Dutch East Indies the holder of an admission permit must have it visaed for departure at immigration ports by landing officer (harbour master), or at other ports by the Head of the local Administration.

Should this be neglected, the permit becomes void.

Furthermore the permit becomes void if the holder does not return to the Netherlands East Indies within one year after the date of his departure.

No residence permit will be issued unless a valid admission permit is handed in.

Further information, if required, can be had from the local immigration office of the Head of the local Administration.

' 0 On July 1st, 1931 this amount will be raised to f 150.
